The sample code and integration tools are used within the eHealth Reference Platform, forming part of the code library for tools and simulators. Access to sample code and the eHealth Reference Platform's online simulator services is supported by suitable right-to-use licenses and terms and conditions regarding the eHealth Reference Platform. ¹ (The eHealth integration toolkits are available from http://www.nehta.gov.au/implementation-resources/ehealth-reference-platform .) The PCEHR Integration Toolkit contains libraries for B2B connectivity to the PCEHR service, providing sample code for all operations as well, as the schemas used and sample SOAP request and response messages. Note that the product components included in this release were previously released on nehta.gov.au as part of the end product PCEHR B2B Gateway Services. See page 3 for a mapping of the relevant product component identifiers.

¹ Notice of Connections (NOC) for HI and PCEHR, and CCA conformance testing for all code, must still be completed by the vendor as per the license agreement that accompanies each product, which states that it is the vendor's "responsibility to test and validate the use of this product within your software".
